A toolkit for families of women offenders preparing to reintegrate into their family and the community

A New Time: A toolkit for families of women offenders preparing to reintegrate into their family and the community is a 47-page book that focuses on the needs of federally sentenced women and their families. The toolkit discusses issues such as:

- Safe and successful family and community reintegration
- Child custody and access during incarceration and upon reintegration
- The role of grandparents as caregivers of the children
- The role of victimization among women and its impact on parenting
- The needs of the family member who was a victim of the offence
- The relational support issues of women.

Successful family and community reintegration is a process that takes time and commitment. "A New Time" helps to point the way.
